The AMERICAN MISSIONARY plans to maintain a high standard as a missionary magazine for the year 1905.

It will be published by the American Missionary Association, monthly, in ten numbers, July and August being omitted.

The field represented in the mission work of this Association is increasingly urgent and important, and the necessity for larger support is apparent.

Brief and interesting items from mission fields, descriptive articles concerning different institutions, discussion of fundamental problems of national importance will appear in the magazine during the year.

Subscription rate fifty cents per year.

WANTS.

1. A steady INCREASE of income to keep pace with the imperative demand of work. This increase can be reached only by regular and larger contributions from the churches, the feeble as well as the strong.

2. ADDITIONAL BUILDINGS for our educational institutions, are needed to receive the constantly increasing number of students; MEETING HOUSES for the new churches we are organizing; MORE MINISTERS, educated and devoted, for these churches.

3. FUNDS FOR INDUSTRIAL DEPARTMENTS — to purchase implements for agricultural training; to erect shops and furnish tools and materials for instruction and use in the mechanical arts, for carpenters, blacksmiths, tinmen, harness and shoemakers; and to supply the girls' industrial rooms.

4. Our work in Porto Rico calls for a school building at Santurce. It is necessary to successful work.

The New School Year.

We send our greetings to the schools which are coming together for the service of another year. The teachers throughout our great system of schools—those who are returning and those who are taking up the work for the first time—have our cordial wishes as they share with us the missionary work of the months before us. We are sure that they do not need to be reminded that in all of our important work there is none so important as the building up of true and strong Christian character in those who are committed to us. We are servants of Him whose divine revealing, sacrifice and witnessing we are to take to others, and with this grace there will be no one so ignorant in mind, so dark in soul, or so poor and needy, that we shall fail to recognize such to be worthy of our best sincerity, our loving friendliness and our patient, sacrificial help. We may sometimes be weary in our work, but we will not be weary of it, and we shall have good harvests with great rewards. May God's blessing rest with the teachers and the schools in this new school year.

A Word to Pastors.

We hope that the churches which have not contributed this year to the work which they have entrusted to us in their behalf will remember this part of their field, and will not fail to send their contributions before the end of September, when we close our books for the year.

WE HAVE to announce the transfer of Dr. Woodbury from his secretaryship in the Association to the chair of Homiletics in Howard University at Washington. The Executive Committee, in accepting the resignation of Dr. Woodbury, put on record that they had found him a most courteous and willing fellow-servant of the churches, fully in sympathy with the special work of the Association, and ever ready to speak effectively and faithfully in its behalf. The sincere and hearty friendship of the office will go with Dr. Woodbury and with their remembrance of his ability and devotion.

Highly appreciative letters have been received from the trustees of Howard University in their appointment of Dr. Woodbury to the chair of Homiletics in that institution. The American Missionary Association can certainly congratulate Howard University upon securing such a valuable and able addition to their corps of theological instruction. His many years of experience as a Corresponding Secretary of the Association will be a most valuable asset in the theological department of Howard University.

WE ARE happy to announce that Rev. Doremus Scudder, D.D., will sail from Hawaii in September, and will spend three months, October, November and December, in presenting the work in Hawaii in behalf of the American Missionary Association. Dr. Scudder will visit the principal cities of the east and the west, and will doubtless receive a hearty welcome from the churches.

Alaska.

The Rev. J. Frank Cross, who for many years has been the efficient superintendent and missionary at the Rosebud Agency in South Dakota, has accepted for the present a transfer to take charge of the mission work in Alaska. He is now en route. We expect letters from him which will interest our readers.

Greeting to Dr. Hood.

THE AMERICAN MISSIONARY extends its greeting to Rev. E. Lyman Hood, Ph.D., who has accepted the Presidency of Atlanta Theological Seminary, and welcomes him to our common work.

"The Niagara Movement."

During the early part of July a conference of colored men was held in Buffalo, N. Y., under the inspiration and leadership of Prof. W. E. B. Du Bois, of Atlanta, Ga. Representative men of the Negro race from fourteen states organized the conference under the significantly strenuous name of the Niagara Movement, appointing a general secretary, state committees and officers, to propagate its convictions and carry out its purposes. A brief platform as an address to the country was adopted, stating in forcible terms what these were. When it is known that Dr. Du Bois was mainly the author of this, nothing needs to be said respecting the vigor and positive character of the principles set forth. They have been criticised in some quarters by those who are in fullest sympathy with the development of the race and its possession of all manhood rights, perhaps not so much because its contentions are incorrect, as that they are more denunciatory than persuasive with some unnecessary "execration." Probably, however, those who consider that the articles of the platform have too much of the Niagara damnatory roar might think otherwise if they were put in these other folks' place and conditions. Mainly, the positions taken cannot be controverted. No race will secure what it does not seek with all its heart. To silently and quietly await the ameliorating influence of time for what others may sometime, or may not, become good enough to bestow, indicates more of the philosophy of Mr. Micawber than it does of the philosophy of history. In the long run, they who wisely and persistently seek are those who find. They are unworthy of human rights who are not intelligent enough, and manly enough, to stand for them. They should, however, take care to be sure they are right before they go ahead. For example, no one can read in the last number of The Voice of the Negro the noble address of Judge Calloway, of Augusta, Ga., or the quotations of Christian wisdom and truth taken from the discourse of Dr. Bradley, of Atlanta, which are shared by multitudes of the better Southern people, and not regret that there is no recognition given to this growingly potential element, as if all people were unfriendly. There is no wisdom in alienating such sympathy and influence as does exist, and which is making itself increasingly felt.

We believe in human brotherhood and in manhood rights, but we think, also, that instead of the protest against the Jim Crow car, which arrangement is sometimes needed for people (black and white) whose behavior, untidiness and uncouthness are justly repulsive, there should have been a protest against the iniquity of relegating all people of color—those who are worthy of respect—to the enforced contact with those who are untidy, rude or disorderly. The stand should have been made upon Caste and the sin of it; upon the classification of the respectable with those who are not; and these include people of more than one race. What refined person has not felt when troops of unwashed Italian peasantry with their bundles and trumpery and odor of garlic were entering the cars intended for respectable people that this was an intrusion which ought to be provided against in separate conveyance? It is the unjust discrimination which holds the wrong.

To the following paragraph in the platform we add our most unqualified dissent. It reads:

"The Negro race in America, stolen, ravished and degraded, struggling up through difficulties and oppression, needs sympathy and receives criticism; needs help and is given hindrance; needs protection and is given mob violence; needs justice and is given charity; needs leadership and is given cowardice and apology; needs bread and is given a stone. This nation will never stand justified before God until these things are changed."

When this was passed the conference ought to have been at Saratoga, where the waters are good for biliousness, rather than so near to the Cave of the Winds. We ask, has there ever been a people struggling up that has had more sympathy? "Criticism," perhaps (we all get that and often it is good for us), but commendation and encouragement a hundred times for one criticism. "Has needed bread and is given a stone," yet millions of dollars have gone for the uplifting of the race, and thousands of the Lord's own children, during scores of years, have left their pleasant homes and carried in their own willing hands to these people the Bread of Life in education and religion. We know well that this paragraph which we quote does not represent the feeling of those who through a most generous philanthropy have been educated by it, and are to-day proving the mettle of their pasture in their ability to uplift others. There is no lack of grateful appreciation in the race, this paragraph to the contrary notwithstanding: it simply was written when the framers of it were tired. Let us so consider it. We trust that good may come from the "movement"; and every endeavor for the elevation of the race has our best wishes.

Prof. George E. Day. The death of the eminent professor in Yale Divinity School, which occurred in July, removes one of the earliest and most devoted friends of the Association—indeed, Dr. Day may in a certain sense be said to have been one of its founders. The story of the Amistad case and trial is well known, also the influence it had in bringing about the formation of the American Missionary Association. Dr. Day, then a young man, was the one who gave the captured Negroes their instruction and prepared them for the Mendi Mission in Africa, which was assumed by the Association. The subsequent long life of Dr. Day in noble devotion, and in eminent and honored service, was but the fulfillment of this early promise.

Our church work in the mountains has met with a loss in the death of Rev. Mason Jones, a faithful and earnest missionary for seventeen years in the mountain churches of Kentucky. Those who knew him well greatly appreciate the consecration and fidelity which characterized his long and difficult work.

WE HAVE from time to time to note examples of generosity among our teachers, which indicate the deep interest that they come to feel in the work through their personal experiences. We mentioned not long since the case of a lady teacher who contributed a considerable amount—more than an entire month's salary—in the interests of her school, and we are happy now to recognize another gift from Principal Wiley and his wife, of Martin, Fla., who is also a teacher, of twenty acres of valuable land contiguous to the school property, for the uses of the school.

TEN ACRES of valuable land has been deeded to the Association by Mr. Frederick F. Stone, of New York City, for the use of Fessenden Academy, at Martin, Fla. Mr. Stone has previously shown much liberality to this interesting school.

From a June Church Report of a North Carolina pastor: "When the hot weather is on us, as it is now, it is not an easy matter to control the people. From close observation of nine and a half years the pastor has found the tendency among our people to lapse in spiritual life during the summer months, from June to August. The cause is mainly physical, but it reacts on mind and spirit. Unhygienic habits in diet, immoderate use of tobacco and coffee, and infrequent use of baths unquestionably irritate the stomach and overheat the blood, producing un-Christian and nervous tempers difficult to control. I am happy to state that much stress is laid by us on body consecration to the Lord with much profit."

Conditional Gifts.

There are not a few people, most benevolently inclined, who would gladly, if they could, give generously to religious and philanthropic work. Their properties may not be large, and while they can and do give, from their incomes, they feel that such gifts are small and commensurate neither with their own desires nor the greatness of the needs. Some hope, ultimately, to leave the larger part of their property, all that they think they can consistently with obligations to others, to benevolent work. Some having none with claims upon them or whose needs they must consider, wish to give all to the furtherance of education, religion or philanthropy. The present care of property, especially in old age, is not a slight matter to them. The seeking of safe investment, the making of a will that will stand, the assuring that property will go as they desire, are matters that weigh upon them. To all such may be commended the plan of conditional gifts which the American Missionary Association, and other organizations, have adopted. Under this plan persons having property may give it to the Association on condition of receiving during life a good rate of interest, the property afterwards to be devoted to the uses of the Association. A safe investment is thus secured, a regular income is assured, and there can be no question of a failure in carrying out the benevolent designs of the donor. It relieves from care. It gives pleasant assurance of ultimate influence in widely useful fields.

We call special attention to this matter in the hope that some may see the way clear thus to place their property with the Association, designating it for the endowment and development of its higher institutions. Unless all signs fail these institutions are to have a long continued and increasingly influential life and development. They have been helpful in doing much toward the settlement of the greatest American problem, by sending out thousands of young men and women who are building pure homes, developing Christian character, advancing in material prosperity, and aiding in many ways the work of righteousness. There is every reason to believe that what has hitherto been done is but the earnest of what shall be. These institutions are good places for the investment of beneficence.

"The Voice of the Negro"

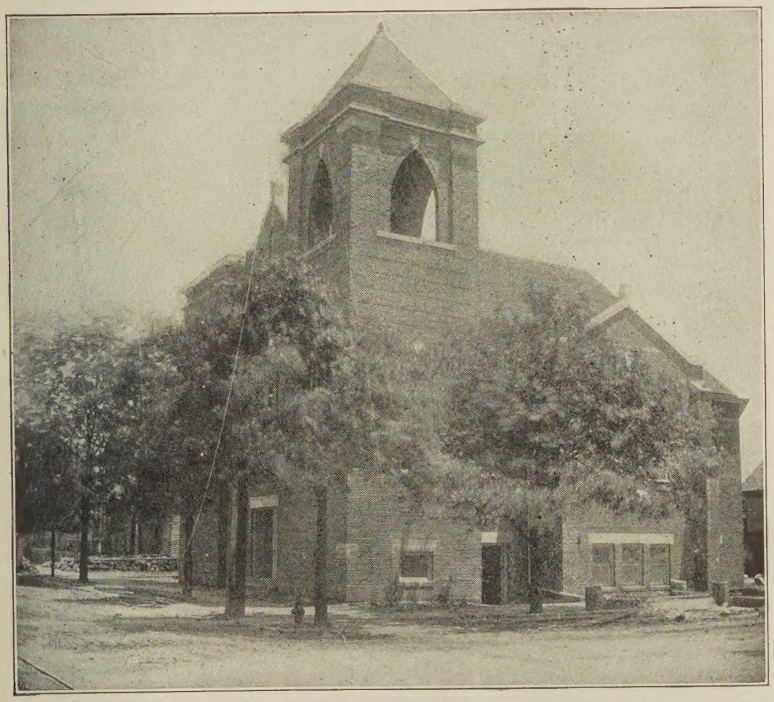
for August is an uncommonly fine number. This illustrated and very able monthly magazine, conducted entirely by those whose "voice" it is, ought to be read by all who wish to know the real thought and progress and strength of the Negro people as demonstrated in their own terms. The keen article of Kelly Miller, in reply to John Watson, is admirable in form and statement, as everything is that comes from Professor Miller. Pickens' reply to Miss Ovington, somewhat labored and much over-italicized, is not quite equal to himself. Mrs. Terrell always writes well. The quotations from Dr. Bradley and Judge Calloway are illuminating and noble utterances.

Caste.

We have received the following letter from a life member of the Association:

"Evangelical churches will grow in strength and in influence as they overcome the sin of caste. The Working People, so-called, are not so much troubled about degrees of wealth as about the spirit, the attitude of mind of the people of wealth; nor are they concerned that some are born to culture and refinement, but about the attitude of mind of the people so born.

"Church members who thank God that they are well educated, or are supplied with money to satisfy every creature comfort and have no concern for those less favored, who thank God that they are not like others born of Italian or Chinese, or Indian or Negro blood, are the Church members who are keeping the working people outside of the churches. The caste spirit and the color line are contrary to the teachings of the New Testament. Liberty-loving Christians strive to create a right public sentiment instead of accepting present conditions."



The First Congregational Church at Birmingham, Ala.

Nearly eighteen years the First Congregational Church of Birmingham hoped and talked and waited for a new church home. The need of a better location, and a new house of worship, had been more keenly felt from year to year.

The situation and future outlook of the church, because its need was not met, had become acute and discouraging. But hope deferred until it seemed as a vanishing dream, is now a beautiful realization.

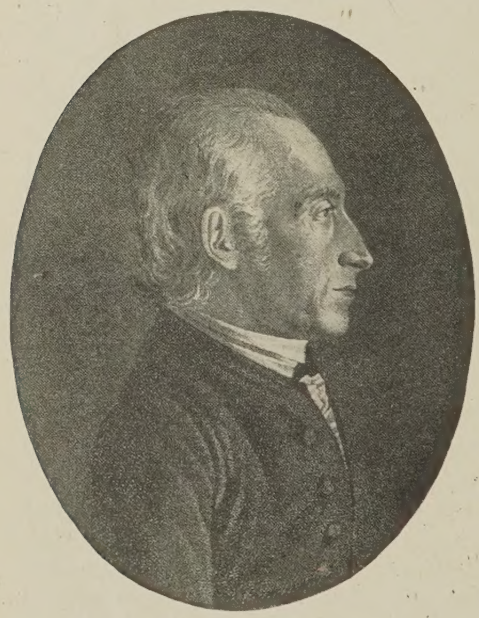
A fine location was secured some fifteen months ago, and a beautiful building, quite modern in its arrangements, has been erected.

Our first service was held in the new church on the third Sunday in May. The joy of the people was manifest in the attendance of nearly five hundred at the first service, and a collection of more than $100 for the day. The interest shown in all the meetings since the opening, awakens a lively hope for the future of the church.

The building is finished in red brick and trimmed in gray stone. The auditorium will have a fixed seating for four hundred, with a choir platform back of the pulpit for about thirty. The lecture room is large enough to seat about 300, and four classrooms, each sufficient to accommodate twenty-five pupils. The basement will be used by the Sunday-school, for prayer meetings, lectures, missionary bands, etc.

The church is needed in Birmingham. It would be difficult to find in many other places, so many strong reasons for a well equipped church as is needed here. To meet conditions successfully the church should have ample accommodations, intelligence, zeal for holiness, and love for souls.

A MISSIONARY VISIT.



OBERLIN AT 62 YEARS OF AGE.

It was in the summer of 1886 that I made my first visit to the home and parish of Oberlin, in the little village of Waldersbach, nestled in the Vosges Mountains. I could not understand how one living so wholly away from the world's life and the world's vision, among a scattered and untaught peasantry, in conditions which would seem to most missionaries, however earnest, too narrow and restricted to command either great gifts or great attention, could project his influence as he did. My interrogation prompted my visit.

Leaving Strasburg by railroad in the morning, in about an hour I arrived at Rothau, a little way up the hills, and was taken to Waldersbach by personal conveyance, in a rig that would have furnished no end of wonder and amusement to an American small boy. The ride through the hills and over them, through valleys and meadows blue with forget-me-nots and bluebells, which nodded to us from the roadsides, with the welcome of birds, is long to be remembered.

Waldersbach had apparently no more than forty or fifty houses, with their rustic thatched roofs, which the mosses with their varied colors made more picturesque than healthful. The manse which Oberlin erected, and which was his home for 39 years, was the most prominent. Previously he lived in a parsonage which had been characterized by others—not by himself—as "a rat-hole."

The present manse is a well built and commodious structure, with a pleasant courtyard in front and a good garden in the rear. It stands well on a narrow street—all the ways are narrow—very near the church, surrounded by steep hills, the mountain tops a little more remote. It was occupied by pastor Werner, whose highly accomplished wife is the granddaughter of Oberlin. They greeted us with fine hospitality and during our stay gave us many incidents and memorabilia of Oberlin. Though sixty years had passed since his death, the house remained almost entirely as he left it; in every room the furniture was the same, simple but good, and suggestive of a cultivated refinement. His library was there as aforetime, containing what was said to be a careful and well chosen selection of books in the French and German languages. Upon the walls were engravings, and among them portraits of eminent characters. The home, as in Oberlin's day, was a model and example for the entire parish.

OBERLIN'S PULPIT.

The church—always open—is as plain as a Friends' meeting-house. With its gallery around three sides, the pulpit perched high aloft, painted and grained, looks down upon the benches below, typifying—I suppose—in its distance above the pews, the elevation of the sacred office. A large tree in front spread its branches over the grave of Madame Oberlin, a tablet in the wall of the church giving the date of her death in 1783.

A later call at the home of the widow of Oberlin's youngest son—then more than four score years of age—the last survivor of his immediate family, who knew and loved him well, and who had outlived Oberlin by more than half a century, linked the present with the past, and gave me many little characteristics of him whom she invariably called "Papa Oberlin."

Sixteen years after it was my privilege to repeat this visit, taking abundant time of several weeks in Waldersbach to acquaint myself with the country and its local history, to tramp over the steeps and study its people, to trace, if possible, in the conditions of the present somewhat more of the secret of this great life hidden away in the hills among a neglected peasantry, the grace of which, now almost four score years after his death, has not lost its strength or charm. "But that is another story."

IN THE SUMMER TIME.

CHARLES J. RYDER.

The good old summer time, this year at least, has not been given over to self-seeking and vacation idleness on the part of our young people. The Silver Bay Convention, Lake George, illustrates the sane and wholesome manner in which the vacation season may be spent. In this the young people have set an example worthy of imitation by their older friends. They mingle recreation, study and inspiration at this gathering in such a way as to attract and help those who attend.

Bible study, really study and not superficial scanning of scripture texts, is the basis of all the work. The bearings of scripture upon the great problems of the day in home and foreign mission fields are carefully traced. This study lays deep the foundation of divine truth upon which these busy and skillful young people are erecting the superstructure of the missionary temple of the future.

In the leadership of the Convention, we Congregationalists are especially fortunate. Secretaries Don O. Shelton and Harry W. Hicks combine the qualities of leadership most helpful in this large interdenominational movement. And yet one hardly knows that it is interdenominational. The fundamental principle of this movement is to do missionary work through the several boards of the denominations represented. They are not recklessly rushing out into new organizations, but wisely recognize the fact that there are sufficient organizations now to meet all the demands of the mission fields.

Sectarianism, as such, has no place in this gathering. In this the Silver Bay Convention sets an example to other similar organizations. Sometimes such conventions, which are nominally interdenominational, have the flavor of a single Christian body so strongly that it is very apparent, and through the effort to make the interdenominational features of the meeting contribute to the importance of a single church, the value of the whole gathering is seriously crippled. The young people of our various churches have learned wisdom from the mistakes of those of us who are older.

If the three denominations that have been coquetting with each other for some time ever come together it will doubtless largely be through the effort of the Young People's Forward Movement. It was my privilege to confer at length with the secretarial representatives of the United Brethren Church. They were really more drawn toward this union by the young people's meetings at Silver Bay than by any other efforts which have been put forth. People marry, not because a minister exhorts them, but because they love each other. These denominations will come together when the spirit that prevails at Silver Bay becomes the spirit of the three denominations. It will not be force from the outside nor prudential arguments, but mutual confidence and affection, such as are kindled by meeting together in this young people's movement.

The balance between home and foreign missions was well maintained. The A. M. A. had a fair and proportionate hearing, and the interest in the work in our various fields represented by the Association was evident and outspoken. Our sister societies also had an appreciative hearing.

The movement which this Convention represents is quietly working another important change. It is greatly improving the literature of the various denominational societies. Both in form and in substance the pamphlets, leaflets and books displayed in the literature of this Convention were almost uniformly of a superior quality. Last year two hundred and fifty thousand books on missions were sold through this agency and a vast amount was distributed gratuitously.

Those of us who have been long interested in the missionary activities of our churches should thank God and take courage and go forward. This movement of the young people means great things for the future. We must prepare ourselves for some serious readjustments for they have visions that we have not had; ideals that we have not reached are before them. They are striving to fulfill these visions and to realize these ideals. Some things that we have thought especially important, and perhaps have been so in the past, will be brushed aside. Paul found this true in his experience, but he rose, as we must, to the conditions essential to the coming of the Kingdom of Christ, and wrote: "Forgetting those things which are behind, let us press forward to those that are before."

OUR NEW CHURCH AT FAJARDO, PORTO RICO.

REV. JOHN EDWARDS, D.D., PASTOR.

I well remember my first visit to Fajardo, it was in the end of November, 1899. I left San Juan on the 14th of that month, and reaching the town of Rio Grande, slept there that night. As I entered the hotel I saw a well-dressed man in the midst of a group of peons playing cards. It was rather an excited group and they did not notice my entrance. They were swearing lustily at each other, but when this respectably dressed person, who outdid the others in profanity, saw me, he stood and politely inquired as to what he could do for me. I took him to be the proprietor and asked if would please order me a glass of hot water to drink, upon which he exclaimed, "Holy Mary, what a drink for a tired man"!

The following morning as I resumed my journey, horseback, who should join me on my way but this same gentlemen of the night before. All along the journey people seemed to know him, addressing him familiarly by name. He also proved to be an agreeable traveling companion, and when we arrived at Luquillo we halted before a little house which he called his home, and very cordially invited me to dismount and enter. He opened the door of a room and I discovered an altar and the paraphernalia of a Romanist priest. I found he was the priest of two or three of these little towns along the road. I took breakfast with him at the house next door to the one he called his home, where his family lived, the woman whom he called his wife and his children. He introduced me to a youth of about seventeen years, said he was his son and that he was "going to send him to the States and make him a priest like his father." I felt that he should complete the work of introduction and present me to the girls of the household as his daughters.

I proceeded from there on my way to Fajardo, my destination. On the 10th of December I announced that I would hold service Sunday morning at a certain place, which is the house where we are still meeting. This place, by the way, was occupied at the time by a political club and we could have the use of it only for Sunday mornings until after an election that was to come off, which happened in about a month. This club held their meetings Sunday afternoons and nights, and every night in the week. The first Sunday morning my congregation numbered seven persons, six women and one man. Four of the women and the man were of the same family, who have remained until now, the other two disappeared after that once. During the time this club was in possession there were some little hindrances and annoyances, one of which was the difficulty of having the room opened at the hour announced, which was nine in the morning. It would be half an hour and sometimes an hour before we could open the place for service. The key was in the hand of a young man hired by the club, and although I had informed him very carefully that I wanted him to open up "exactly at nine o'clock," yet that hour would arrive and he would not. I would go myself to look for the janitor and ask why hadn't he opened? "Oh," he had "given the key to Don ——," and then he would leisurely saunter away for it. Hurry? no such thing; this would be unworthy of a man, especially when serving an American, and that a heretic. I have discovered later that I had been already dubbed "un buscon," that is to say, a cheat. I found a remedy for these gloomy experiences in prayer and in plenty of work. At last the club left the place and ever since we have held services morning and evening every Sunday. I also started Wednesday night meetings to practice singing the hymns and prepare the people for the Sunday-school lesson. The present mid-week prayer meeting is a continuation of that same class. I went also on missionary tours around to many other places, but always arranged to be at Fajardo every other Sunday. During the time between February and August the work developed, the number of attendants increased to between thirty and forty, the majority of whom showed interest in their soul's salvation; and just as I was to leave for the States in behalf of the work, I requested all who believed Christ as their only Saviour and desired to live the Christian life, as we taught it, to stand. Twenty-five arose. In November, when I returned with my family, we found that nearly all of these had remained firm and faithful believers, so that when we resumed our work at Fajardo we had a number of helpers to carry it along. Very soon the gospel took a fresh hold upon the mind of the people, the congregation continued to increase Sunday after Sunday, many new hearts awakening, and interest deepening in those who had already professed belief.

In the beginning of the year 1901 we organized a class of probationers at Fajardo to prepare them for church membership, and if they appeared to be Christians, to admit them and recognize them as church members. Eighteen were admitted, who, with some little formality and the appointment of officers, we recognized as "The Evangelical Congregational Church of Fajardo"; in Spanish it reads, "La Iglesia Evangelica Congregacional de Fajardo," and so it will be engraved above the entrance to the tower of the new church building now just completed. Since the organization on that Sunday we have admitted into full membership 176. Forty-seven have been dismissed to other churches, three of these to the Methodist Church in Vieques, and forty-four to organize a church at Las Cabezas. Eighty-six are left on the roll of the church at Fajardo, and twelve have since been received. There are forty-four on the church roll at Las Cabezas and twenty-nine more soon to be received. There is no church yet at Luquillo, but there are about twenty professing conversion there and waiting to be admitted as members somewhere.

The end of last year the church of Las Cabezas was organized with the above forty-four members dismissed from here, and ever since there have been conversions. As many as forty-two since then have confessed Christ at that precinct. A number of young people there can speak and preach very acceptably, and notice should be taken of these to help develop them into more efficient workers. I am convinced that they have the heart and the ability for it. They have studied hard for the last two years, coming over to Fajardo to recite and for Bible readings. Their studies are well done, after driving the oxen and ploughing all day, or doing other things on the farm. At night, by their imperfect lamps, they study the lessons prepared for them. They study the gospel of Matthew and commenced with the parables. I prepared the lesson to show them how I wanted them to study it. They recite the parable as written down by the evangelist, all from memory, and at the close I relate what to them is the main lesson taught by the Master in that parable. I have to say that they astonished me by the thoroughness of their work and the originality of their remarks. The same again with the miracles recorded in Matthew, etc., and some of the young women there (at Las Cabezas) have persuaded the boys to give them these papers I had prepared, which they are now studying.

During my missionary experience one of the most solemn duties of the work is to prepare probationers for full membership. Verily, I approach such work with trembling of heart. With such reverence and interest and spirit of inquiry do these simple souls give themselves to this work of preparation, that one must be wise and patient and loving to meet them. Religion never meant anything like this to them when they were Romanists. Now self-denial and the cross have an entirely new meaning.

They have realized, almost every one of them, that "those who would live godly in Christ Jesus shall suffer persecution." The priest and his followers are doing all in their power to frustrate our work, in fact to destroy it. But their slanders, calumnies and falsehoods about us do us no harm, while they show us clearly what ignorant, deluded creatures they are, religiously, both priest and followers.

It is marvelous how the reading of the Bible and the preaching of its message disturb the peace and equanimity of the Romanist church here. Freethinkers, theists, atheists, agnostics, and every shade of infidelity goes unchallenged here, but if an individual reads the Bible and accepts Christ as the only Saviour, he is denounced as a "heretic and apostate," and the "faithful" are warned not to have any intercourse with him, because he is condemned by the "holy fathers" of the Church. A special committee is formed to visit the houses of these so-called "apostates" to reclaim them for the Church. Their enormous heresies are recounted; but these workers do not visit the abandoned characters of the town and the criminals to try to reclaim them. The Protestant heretics seem to be considered more of a menace to the Romanist Church of Fajardo than the gamblers, adulterers, drunkards, cock-fighters and thieves. The whole brood of such sinners are passed by in trying to bring a heretic back to the "holy mother church."

I have strenuously taught our Church here that we have nothing to do with the politics of the island; nevertheless, not one of the "Federal" party has entered our Church, even as a hearer. We have reached only Porto Rican republicans, i. e., the party favorable to American rule. The other party, including the majority of the "better class," as they are called, have kept scrupulously aloof from our congregation.

CLAMBERING UP AND HELPING OTHERS UP.

BY REV. J. H. HEROD, PASTOR OF THE CHURCH AT ABBEVILLE, LA.

The writer of the sketch given below has reluctantly consented to its publication, saying that he feels he had "done nothing worthy of print." We give it, that the white boys to whom this letter may come can see with what struggles and against what hindrances thousands of young people in the South are climbing up hand over hand. Not all have the same experiences, but thousands have similar ones in their contests and their conquests.

According to your request, I will attempt to give you a brief sketch of my life. I was born in 1861 somewhere in Mississippi and near Memphis, Tenn. When two years old my father moved to Memphis and hired as a porter in a wholesale grocery. My mother died in a few weeks after we moved to Memphis. I do not remember her. There were three children, two boys and one girl.

At six years of age I was sent for three months to a very poor public school. When eight years old, the latter part of the year my father sent my sister, who was the eldest, and myself to a private school for five months. At the age of nine years, without father or mother, I was left alone in the world.

I found employment in a white family as yard boy for five dollars per month. This job I kept for six months, my uncle coming every month to collect my wages. In 1869 I was bound out to a colored man by my uncle. The bargain, made in my presence, was that I was to go into the country and carry water on the farm to a lot of hands, from August until December, 1869; then I was to return to Memphis, and was to receive $50.00 cash so that I might be able to go to school. In a few hours I found myself on board a river steamboat going down the Mississippi a distance of four hundred and fifty miles. The old man was very kind to me on the journey, but when we reached our destination I found out in whose clutches I was. Here I was, on a great cotton plantation with its large quarters and hundreds of hands.

The first Sunday I spent on the plantation I shall never forget. Early in the morning the great bell rang and I saw people running I knew not where or for what, but a blow from this overseer broke the spell. He gave me a bucket and went with me to the smoke-house to get our weekly rations, informing me on the way that I was bound to him until I was 21 years old. He had no papers to verify his statement; nevertheless, for three and a half years I suffered the most brutal treatment which I thought a human being could possibly undergo and live. I never saw a schoolhouse nor entered a church all these years, neither had I heard from any of my relatives. In the spring of 1873 I went before a Justice of the Peace and made oath that I was thirteen years old. This gave me permission to choose whom I pleased to be my guardian. Under my new guardian I was allowed to go to the public school one month in the year. In 1874 I made a crop with a good old gentleman, and was planning to take the $90.00 due me for my labors and go back to Memphis and attend school, for I was determined to get some sort of an education at any cost. Just within one week of Christmas my plans were frustrated. I was on the wagon hauling water to help gin the cotton. The day was very cold, and the driver went out of his way to a store to get whiskey "to warm him up." He in time began "to warm up" the team. The result was the team of mules ran away, barrels knocked me off the wagon, my left foot got caught within the spokes and before the team could be stopped my leg was entirely crushed. It was through the mercy of God that I was not killed. The nearest doctor was ten miles away. When he came, he was half drunk and wanted to amputate the leg at once. I would not agree, as I thought I was going to die at all events. He went away and never came back again. For two weeks, without care of my crushed limb, I suffered indescribable agony. I begged the Lord to take me home out of my misery. A colored man now severed the leg with his knife, but the Lord would not call me home. I could not understand why God wanted me to stay here and suffer—a lad of thirteen years without father or mother or any one to care for me thus crippled. I yearned to go and be at rest. Thus, for four long months I was upon my bed, three doctors saying I could not live.

When I was able to sit up, I realized more than ever how lonely I was, and I questioned the wisdom of God in sparing my life—"What have I to live for?" "What can I do?" "I will be a beggar all my life."

As I grew stronger I began to look around for something to do. The colored people in the quarter would bring their children to me to take care of while they were in the fields, and I began to teach them. In this way I saw more clearly why I should live. The people were always calling on me to do something; to write a letter, or to work a sum in addition. When I got able to go about on crutches I went to the church and tried to teach in the Sunday-school, and little by little I was finding out the reason why God left me in the world. Thus, from 1875 to 1884, I worked in the farm garden, doing whatsoever my hands found to do. In the spring of 1884 a Christian lady teacher came from New Orleans to teach the colored public school at Lakeport, Ark. She was an excellent teacher. On Saturdays, when I was free to go, she gave me lessons, and had me recite the following week. This lady told me about Straight University and urged upon me to try to save up money enough to go there. She wrote to the President about me, and received a catalogue and a letter saying, "tell the young man to write to me." I was a week trying to write a letter, and when it was finished I carried it to this teacher for her to correct before I should send it. She read it but made no corrections, giving her reasons. In reply to this letter the President said if I could pay $10.00 a month and should prove faithful I might come and stay. I made a great effort and saved up $50.00. All I wanted, as I thought, was three months in Straight University to help me out.

In February, 1885, I left for New Orleans. When I got off the street car in front of the College buildings I saw many students coming out from breakfast. Standing outside the gate I called one young man and asked, "Could I see the Boss." He led me to the President's office. I was received kindly and asked several questions, and finally told that I could "enter the 4th grade." I cannot express my feelings, things were so different from anything I had ever seen. The morning exercises in the chapel, the deportment on the playgrounds and in the dining-room, in the classroom, and the church services were a perfect revelation to me; there was always something new happening. I worked hard, using every moment, and when the school closed in May I was promoted to the 5th grade. I was extremely sorry when school closed, as I had to go back to Arkansas to find somehow enough money to enter school the next fall. I did it, and was able to return at the opening of the fall term. So year by year I kept on, not three months, but nine years. During the summer months I taught in public school, and always in the Sabbath schools. In order to instruct my people as to what true Christianity is I closely studied the Bible, and the more I drank from that fountain the greater the desire became to tell it to others. I also took a course in Theology in dear old Straight.

I shall never forget the teacher who told me of Straight University. I have myself taught since then in the very school where she gave me instruction. I met there also the same old colored man who had treated me with such cruelty. I taught his children, and with tears in his eyes he begged my forgiveness for the way he had treated me.

Ten years ago I visited Arkansas and preached in a certain church, and on giving an invitation for those who would accept Christ as their Saviour to make this decision at once, that poor old soul, who abused me so and who was in that meeting, there confessed and testified for Christ.

I came to Abbeville, La., sent by the A. M. A., as pastor in 1904. The Lord has blessed the work. The Congregational Church stands in this community for Christian morals, Christian character, intelligence and upright living. Several of the members of our church have gone from here to dear old Straight University, and day by day I am learning to see more of God's reason for not taking me from the world when I wanted to go.

"If we permit the people of this Republic to get before their minds the view that material well being carried to an ever higher degree, is the one and only thing to be striven for, we are laying up for ourselves not merely trouble but ruin."—President Roosevelt.

"The Memphis Commercial Appeal," says: Drive the easy-going, careless and childish Negro out and tenant the plantations with Teutonic, Latin or Mongolian races and very few generations would pass before the descendants of the present day rich planters would be moving in covered wagons in search of new homes or working as servants and tenants of the newcomers who would own the land.

A thrifty, saving, frugal peasantry would herd and hoard every dollar coming into its hands and ere long would be lending the planter money or buying his land from him. The invincible stinginess of the European peasant would be an overmatch for the openhanded generosity of the Southern planter, who is accustomed to the come-day-go-day, happy-go-lucky Negro laborer, and in time it would tell to the planters' disadvantage.

Hence, the Negro is a necessity to the Southern white man, and he is going to remain. He can not get away and no one wants him to leave. He should remain and remain in peace, and on terms of good feeling and interdependence, and any one who, for the sake of political preferment or otherwise, inflames race prejudice and passions or in any way mitigates or destroys the existing good feeling does the Negro a great wrong and the white man a greater wrong. We must allow those engaged in the heat of the chase for office a long latitude and a liberal amount of opportunism, but when they pursue a course that is sure to do the public a grave injury they should be admonished of their error.

Fog. The Bishop of Manchester calls missionary ignorance fog. In a fog things that are nearest look very much larger than they really are. A horse looks as large as a camel. The bishop said he knew parishes that seemed to him to be enveloped in a pretty thick fog of ignorance. When asked to help forward missionary work, the congregation gave an assurance of their profound interest in the work, but explained that that year they were engaged in raising funds for some local need—perhaps a new organ. Next year the heating apparatus was being improved to keep the organ warm, and the year after someone remembered that the tower and steeple, part of the original design of the church, had never been built. It was necessary to dispel a fog that that people might see objects outside their immediate locality.—Missionary Intelligencer.
